

ROADS WORRIED; CONFERENCE SECRET

Representatives of Companies Not Satisfied With Governors' Statement.

Attorneys for the Southern Roads Meet to Formulate Plans.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 2.—Representatives of the railroad companies doing business in Georgia, Alabama, and North Carolina are not satisfied with the statement from the governors of the three States that no injury will result to transportation companies from yesterday's conference here of the trio of executives.

Neither are the railroad men pleased by the governors' declaration that the latter "do not consider it desirable to make public the details of the conference at this time."

The railroad attorneys want to know at once what was done at the meeting. A session is being held here today of the companies' legal advisers from all three States and subsequent meetings are expected at the capitals of Alabama and North Carolina.

The situation will be gone over fully at these meetings, pressure brought to bear to find out what the governors propose to do, and a campaign outlined to resist any action the transportation men may consider inimical to their interests.

If the governors had not been so secret about their conference the railroad men probably would not have been so much worried. It is known, in a general way, that they plan co-operation in enforcing rate regulations on the three States. The conference began yesterday morning and lasted until late yesterday afternoon. When they adjourned they gave out a statement, signed by all three of the governors, which in part was:

"The conference has been most satisfactory. We arranged to co-operate in the investigation of the facts and law connected with the duties of our States to the public and to transportation companies. We will co-operate with the States which have the same problems. No injury has been done to any corporation in either of our States by exercise of the power of regulation."

NEW YORK TRIBUNE MAY CHANGE HANDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—It was reported in newspaper circles yesterday that the New York Tribune is to change hands, Edward Hatch, Jr., of the firm of Lord & Taylor, according to the rumor, being the prospective purchaser. Mr. Hatch, when seen, admitted he had made an offer of the Tribune, saying:

"It is true that I have been in negotiations looking to the purchase of the Tribune. On Mr. Whitelaw Reid's plans and desires the entire matter may be said to depend. The paper is really controlled by D. O. Mills, who, on account of his years, wishes to get out of various enterprises."

"So far as I am aware," said Hart Lyman, editor of the Tribune, "there is no more truth in the report that Edward Hatch, Jr., is to buy the Tribune than there is to any of the various other reports concerning the change of ownership. This is the first mention that has been made to me of Mr. Hatch's name."

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL SAILS FOR AMERICA

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who is to make another tour of the United States under the management of Liebler & Co., sails from Southampton today. She will begin her New York engagement at the Lyric Theatre, November 11. The engagement at the New York playhouse is for one week only and Mrs. Campbell will leave immediately afterward for her coast-to-coast tour, visiting all the large cities of the country. In the spring Mrs. Campbell will return to New York, and it is announced, will be seen in several new plays, among them "Euripides," "Electra," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbelwhite," and "Maudie," are to be kept in her repertoire, however.

Accompanying Mrs. Campbell on her American tour are her daughter, Stella, who will make her stage debut in the United States, and Benjamin Webster, her leading man.

FARMER FINDS REVENUE SELLING CABBAGE LOW

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Nov. 2.—For several weeks there has been a little change in the offerings of the local markets, but this week the local dealers have something new—bright, golden sauerkraut. A large grower of cabbage has turned a bear on the market, much to the satisfaction of sauerkraut admirers. He has started a flood of cabbage into the local markets, which he sells at 2½ cents a head, and he is selling it by the hundred, too. The reason for this is that he is after revenge on a large grower, who still has much cabbage on his hands. The price, until the break came, was 5 to 8 cents, and it was feared that the kraut supply would not be limited, but expensive. There are nearly 200,000 heads of cabbage planted within a radius of several miles from Stroudsburg, and it is expected that the present price will be maintained long enough to enable everybody to get a good supply at a moderate cost.

WARY MULE DUMPS MASTER UNDER WATER CART SPRAY; POLICE STAYS POISED CLUB

"For tricks that are dark and for ways that are vain."

"The short tempered mule is peculiar." This sentiment is thoroughly in accord with the ideas of Romulus Jonek. Romulus goes further than this and insists that a mule "ain't got no sense of a crocodile," that he is emblematical of all that is evil and worthless, and that if he got his just deserts somebody would "break his fool head."

Romulus' anger is not entirely without cause or justice. "What he has suffered from that mule, nobody knows. This morning the crises came. Romulus will no longer stand for the proposition that is put upon him by the mule."

It was early morning. The sun was just beginning to light up the chilly earth, as Romulus behind his ancient and battered steeled drove down Pennsylvania avenue. Romulus was filled with a strange discontent. Yet the mule, allowed to have his own way, was not showing any symptoms of a desire to toward unusually evil conduct. Twice he irritated his driver by apparently trying to drive head foremost into a street car, and once Romulus broke into excited eloquent profanity as the noble animal tried frantically to upset a lamp post, but that was merely his ordinary mode of expressing his joy.

Meditates in Roadway.

Suddenly, however, he stopped in the middle of the road and gently closing his eyes, became absorbed in prayerful meditation. What he was thinking about will never remain a secret? Probably his thoughts were of a high and lofty nature, maybe he was dreaming of his boyhood days on the farm.

Romulus grew angry. Rising from his seat he addressed the patient mule in passionate accents, heaping opprobrium upon him. He intimated as to his personal appearance, his lineage and his characteristics. So absorbed did he become in his remarks that he failed to notice the watering cart that was rapidly nearing him.

"Ah, think," began Romulus savagely as the watering cart drew to do the public a service by slaughtering his steed, but alas! Officer Lawrence Quill appeared around the corner at the very moment, and put Romulus under arrest.

Romulus Rendeth Air.

Then a blood-curdling screech rent the air. The icy water from the wagon deluged the unfortunate Romulus. The combination of circumstances was too much for even Romulus. He seized a club from his wagon, and made a wild rush for the mule. For a second it appeared that he was slaughtering his steed, but alas! Officer Lawrence Quill appeared around the corner at the very moment, and put Romulus under arrest.

And as his vituperative master was being led away the mule, the cause of all the trouble, walked away with a visible smile upon his face.

TROUSSEAU RICHEST EVER MADE IN PARIS

More Than Fifty Dresses, Cost $120,000, Princess Bonaparte's Outfit.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—M. Rothschild, formerly of New York, but now superintendent of the great dressmaking firm which is making the greater part of the trousseau of Princess Bonaparte, said today:

"Three hundred persons of various categories are working day and night at full speed to complete the trousseau, which is probably the most extensive and the richest ever made in Paris."

"The total value of the dresses alone is $120,000. They have been mostly designed by Mme. Wagner, a member of the firm, but the princess herself has given some general instructions. She has a liking especially for Empire gowns, as they suit her figure, and for light wine-colored dresses. Among them are a large number of white satin, white crepe de chine, a white mousseline wedding gown, a white mull, and lace that cost $5,000, and a veil at $3,000."

"Before the engagement, the princess dressed plainly, her bills aggregating between $5,000 and $10,000 a year. She does not follow fashion, preferring to exceed her own judgment."

"The bridal handkerchiefs cost $25 each, owing to the fine embroidery; the towels $13 each, being bordered with broderie Anglaise. Each set of underclothing cost $1,000; the bed linen $5,000, due to Valenciennes lace; table cloth, $500. The shoes cost $200 a pair, being provided with gold buckles and jewels."

"The princess has spent, I am told, half a million dollars in jewelry. She follows the making of her trousseau with the utmost interest. She will not have her dresses photographed unless she does not wish them to be worn by any model."

WARDENS WRANGLE OVER PHEASANTS

Some Say Game Is Scarce and Others That Birds Are Plentiful.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 2.—Reports of the State game wardens conflict as to the presence of pheasants in Pennsylvania this season. Some of the wardens report that there is a great scarcity of pheasants, due to an epidemic of cholera among the birds. Others report that these birds are plentiful, but that they are still in the mountain ridges, and have not yet collected.

The wardens report deer plentiful; bear exceedingly plentiful; an abundance of rabbits; scarcity of quail, and plenty of wild turkeys. Sportsmen all over the State are writing to the headquarters of the game commission, complaining against the change in the game laws. The last legislature, the season for killing squirrels, pheasants, and woodcock was advanced to October 1, and the killing of rabbits and wild turkeys to October 15, which is fifteen days earlier than heretofore.

The season for killing quail opens on November 1, under this new law, and closes, on November 30, when the season for all other game also closes. Hunters claim that rabbits being killed this season are much smaller than usual, for the reason that they have not yet had time to mature. The reports of the wardens indicate that so far this season there have been comparatively few violations of the game laws.

From the reports received from wardens, the game commission announces that hunting has been good in the following counties: Clinton, Elk, Cameron, Berks, Schuylkill, Lehigh, and Luzerne. Hunters, however, had little or no success in Clearfield, Center, Snyder, Pike, and Wayne counties.

WANT DECISION IN PEONAGE CASE

Much Hangs Upon Court of Appeals Ruling in Cape Girardeau Action.

Department of Justice officials would like to know the cause of the long delay of the Circuit Court of Appeals in acting upon the Cape Girardeau, Mo., peonage case, one of the most important actions brought in the long list of prosecutions for peonage recently undertaken by the Government.

If the Government is upheld in the Cape Girardeau case, proof only of involuntary servitude will be necessary to make a charge of peonage stick and inflict the penalty upon persons guilty of enforcing an unwilling slavery upon laborers. The case has been with the Court of Appeals for more than six months, indicating that the judges have found in it problems difficult of solution.

Prosecution in this instance could be based upon the civil rights action, because the victims were American citizens.

Several other of the pending cases the "peons" have been imported foreign laborers, a fact which rendered necessary a different legal procedure in the prosecution. The most notable instance of the latter kind of peonage will come up in this city this week.

Russell himself will present the argument for the Government. New York labor agents have gathered together the laborers, shipped them to Florida, where they were held captive and forced to work in the everglades.

TOOK HUSBY AWAY; HER "IN-LAWS" PAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—For taking her husband away from pretty Mrs. Sallie Cochran, her parents must pay the young wife $7,500. She sued for $50,000 damages in the supreme court, Brooklyn, before Justice Jaycox, and the jury decided in her favor yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cochran and their son Ernest, the bone of the contention, live at 238 Clifton place. Ernest, though now only nineteen years old, was married to Miss Sally Bailey in secret three years ago. They immediately separated, vowing never to tell their parents or friends. Cochran didn't keep the vow, for five months later he confessed to his father in a letter written in Philadelphia, a safe distance from the angry parent.

The senior Mr. Cochran immediately went to his son's wife and told her she would not live with his son as his wife for two years more—until he became of age. The bride ordered her father-in-law from the house.

Soon after the proceedings just concluded were begun through Mrs. Augusta Bailey, the bride's mother. On the witness stand the young wife and her mother told of the Cochran's efforts to poison the mind of their son against his wife.

GRADUAL RETROGRESSION; LANDSLIDE DEAD NOW 200

NEW BOKHARA, Turkistan, Nov. 2.—Recent returns of the fatalities at Karatagh show that instead of 15,000 persons being killed only about 200 lost their lives. Most of these perished under the landslide which buried 400 of the houses of the town.

Karatagh is situated in a small, natural amphitheater among lofty hills, the Karatagh mountain hanging over it on the west side and a river flowing on the other. At the height of the recent earthquake a great section of the mountain broke away and slid rapidly upon the town.
